OPENING OF NEW ASSEMBLY IS NOW EAGERLY AWAITED

Stage Set for "New Deal"
Which Pa. Legislators
Promise

ORGANIZATION ROUTE

Rep. Grover C. Talbot, Delaware, is Conceded
Speakership

By Joseph A. Loftus
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Dec. 29.—(INS)—
Eyes of Pennsylvania's body politic turn to Harrisburg next week where the stage is set for a new assembly and for the "new deal" its members have promised.

Formal opening is scheduled for Tuesday at noon when Gov. Gifford Pinchot delivers his message to a joint session. Organization work gets under way on the preceding night when caucuses of both parties will be held.

With election of Rep. Grover C. Talbot, Delaware County, as speaker conceded, organization of the assembly will be a routine matter, barring a possible surprise culling of strength
by forces who aim to strip the speaker of his power in the appointment of committees.

The Democratic representation of 65 in the House of 207 members is behind such a movement. While a coalition of Democrats and Pinchot adherents throughout the session is out of the picture, cohesion by the two groups on several important items is not totally unexpected. This may occur immediately after the session starts, with the Speaker's power as the basis. Democrats planning to hand the speaker a mere gavel, minus the whip, have found sympathy among administration members, who comprise a substantial portion of the Republican majority in the House.

Their objective is to take from the speaker the power to appoint committees.
This power, instead, would be vested in a committee on committees.
A similar amendment to the House
rules was made in 1913 after success of the bull moose campaign. It was rescinded two years later.

Success of such a move would be equivalent to election of a fusion
speaker by Democrats and administration, insofar as committee personnel
is concerned.

Another amendment to House rules
the Democrats are expected to propose provides for a reduction in the number of votes necessary to discharge
a committee from consideration of a bill. Present rules require 165 votes for the discharge of a committee.
Democrats would reduce that figure to 60. Such drastic revision would enable the minority at any time to haul a bill out of committee and bring it to a floor vote. The organization control of committees would mean
but little under such a mode of operation.

In the Senate, with the Republican state organization in complete control,
no such difficulties will be encountered.
Senator James S. Boyd, Montgomery County, will be re-elected president pro tempore.

Above and beyond these squabbles
in the work of organization lies a vast field of legislative labor which routine paths would never even approach.
The two weeks' recess usually taken after the day of convening has been abandoned this year in favor of a plan of speed and efficiency. The second week of January, it is confidently expected, will see the flow of legislation
well under way.

Find Infant's Body In Box Car Here Today

The body of an unidentified, newly-born, male infant, white, was found in a box car of the Pennsylvania Railroad at noon today.

The body was found by Charles Rogers, an employee of the D. Landreth Seed Company. Mr. Rogers was cleaning the car preparatory to loading seeds and kicked what he thought was a bundle of paper over the floor of the car. As his toe struck the weighty substance he unwrapped the package
and was horrified at the discovery.

The body was wrapped in a Philadelphia
newspaper bearing date of December 23rd.

BALANCED BUDGET DRIVE STRIKES NEW OBSTACLE

60,000 Teachers Think State
Wealthy Enough to Finance
The Present System

PLAN TO "STAND PAT"

HARRISBURG, Dec. 29.—(INS)—
The drive for a balanced state budget
without new taxes struck an obstacle today—the opposition of some 60,000
teachers whose spokesmen believe Pennsylvania is wealthy enough to finance its present school system.

Delegates attending the state education association meeting, concluding here today, made it plain their position is "stand pat" on the Edmonds Act and its salary schedule and that any move to revise it downwards will be fought strenuously.

Although cognizant of the tax burden
on real estate, the educators believe there are sources of wealth bearing little or no taxation and adopted a motion for appointment of a committee to seek out those sources.

The motion declared that "Pennsylvania is not overtaxed for school purposes,
and there are many sources of untaxed wealth in Pennsylvania which may be assessed for educational purposes." An income tax was emphasized in the subsequent discussion.

This decision, as well as adoption of the legislative committee's report favoring that the Edmonds Act remain intact, struck back directly at Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction, who led advocates of temporary downward salary adjustments for the teachers.

The teachers also condemned the action of school boards in ordering blanket dismissals of teachers and thereby placing them in disadvantageous positions in a salary schedule revision. School code provisions to counteract such situations were recommended.

Final sessions of the state gathering were scheduled for this afternoon.

But Only One Can Win

The three statesmen shown here beaming smiles of confidence are the outstanding candidates for the post of Speaker of the House when Vice-President-elect John Garner, the present incumbent, relinquishes the gavel. They are, left to right, Representatives John McDuffie of Alabama, chairman of the Economy Committee; Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floor leader, and Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of the Appropriations Committee. Need we say all are Democrats?

Wanted! Four more couples to apply for marriage licenses in Bucks County before midnight next Saturday.
If the appeal made by the officers of the Clerk of Orphans' Court at Doylestown

Bucks County.

Practically every county in the country has suffered a decrease in marriage license receipts but not so in Bucks County. Clerk of Orphans' Court

it in their bones" that the 1600 mark will be passed before Saturday but they do not want to take any chances.
They intimated that they might "make it interesting" for the eleventh-hour applicants in order to break the record.

REICHERT CHRISTMAS DISPLAY UNUSUAL ONE

Christmas Village at Newport-ville Home Operated by 17 Switches

BEAUTIFUL WATERFALL

NEWPORTVILLE, Dec. 29.—Adults and children alike are getting a big "thrill" from an elaborate Christmas display in this village. The display is a big village in itself, and a most up-to-date
one at that.

An electric "city" has been given a place of prominence on the second floor of the home of Louis Reichert along the Neshaminy Creek, and to this Christmas town, at the invitation of the builder, grown-ups and children are making their way at all hours of the day and evening, to see the splendid lay-out.

In order to give an idea of the large scale on which the display is arranged, it is well to state that 17 control switches are required. These switches operate the train that makes its way past the 17 homes in the village; work
the train switches; operate the waterfall upon which 40 bulbs cast their glistening beams; change the colors of the lights that are thrown on the water-fall; one is for the village street lights; another for the lighting of the residences.

The main structures in this miniature city are the railroad station, the church and the town hall, and all about these are grouped little homes, each individually lighted. The railroad is complete in itself, with automatic gates and signal bell at the crossing;
a steel bridge over which the train runs,
and a large tunnel under a mountain;
then there is a tower from which signals
are given; and the lights giving the signals
to stop or proceed, work to perfection.
There are blinker safety-signs at the crossing, to warn the traveler of approaching danger.

The long electric train runs upon 150 feet of track, which "mileage" includes a lengthy switch.

The streets of the town are well
lighted with lights upon fine standards, and some of the street signs, giving names of the thoroughfares, are illuminated.

The entire "plot" is covered with green "grass," and the roadways are fashioned of tiny pebbles, over which motor-vehicles of all descriptions glide.
Trees and shrubbery are shown in profusion, and in some of the fields
cattle graze.

The water-fall glistens in the light of 40 bulbs, and any of four colors or combination of these colors thrown upon it make a sight to behold. Near the foot of the waterfall a company of soldiers are seen starting their long march up over the mountainside. There are cavalrymen, and foot-soldiers, en route to their encampment, their natural-appearing jaunt being made possible by use of an endless belt.

In another corner of the set-up is a large Christmas tree glimmering with colored electric lights.

Approximately two weeks' work was required on the part of Mr. Reichert to assemble the many pieces, and place them in operation. Starting the affair in a small way six years ago, the owner has added to it each year,
with the result it is a most unusual assembly today.

Life-Long Resident of Middle-

FOLLOWED FARMING

At the age of 84 years, Aldridge Everitt,
a well-known and life-long resident of Middletown Township, died
last evening.

Lettitia Everitt, Philadelphia, and Miss Mary Everitt, Middletown Township;
two sons, Samuel and Joseph, both of Middletown Township; and nine grandchildren.

The late Mr. Everitt, who was well-known and highly respected by many Bucks Countians, was a member of the Emile M. E. Church. He was also affiliated with Neshaminy Lodge, 422,

COUNCIL RESCINDS ACTION; AWARDS ASH CONTRACT

Adolfo Paci Given Job at $561
Lower Than Present
Contract

TO CHANGE ORDINANCE

Borough council assembled in recessed session last night, rescinded its action of December 12th when it rejected all bids for the collection of ashes and rubbish. The contract last night was awarded to Adolfo Paci, Mansion street, for $2,775. The contract price is $561 lower than C. A.
Weber & Sons received this year for the work.

Council rescinded its former action
upon the advice of the borough solicitor, Howard I. James. When the bids were rejected December 12th, it was the intention of council to have the present ordinance governing the collection of ashes and rubbish changed so that the contract would be awarded for a two-year period rather than one year, as it is at present. The bids at the previous meeting were therefor rejected and street and highway committee instructed to confer with the borough solicitor concerning the proposed changes in the ordinance.

Mr. James gave it as his opinion that as the bids were advertised for under the existing ordinance they would have to be accepted and contract given to the lowest bidder. Now council is in a position to change the ordinance if it is so desired, so that when bids are asked in the future they will be for a longer period of time.

Borough solicitor will now prepare the bond for the new contractor and this will be submitted to council along with the contract.

Council last night approved the recommendation of the street and highway
committee made at the December 12th meeting and awarded the contract.

Councilmen present were Winters,
Wagner, Williams, Warner, Wisner,
Morris, Schmidt, Myers, Vandegriff, Fallon, Winslow, Spezzano, Fry, Pfeifer, Littleton.

BORO' ENDS YEAR WITH BALANCE AND BOOKS ARE CLOSED

Councilmen Hear Annual Report
of Borough Treasurer For the Year 1932

BOND DEBT GREATER

Green Lane Improvement
Boosts the Indebtedness, But $19,000 in Bonds Are Paid

Financial affairs of Bristol Borough were concluded last night when council heard read the financial report for the year. Borough treasurer, William J.
Lefferts, read the entire report to council. The reading required 37 minutes.
The report and accounts have been audited and found correct, according to the report of the auditors, William G. Buckman and M. D. Weagley.

The financial statement submitted by the treasurer, William J. Lefferts, shows that the borough finishes the year with a balance on hand of $249.44. During the year the bonded indebtedness was increased from $300,000 to $308,000.

This increase is attributed to the floating of a $27,000 bond issue for Green Lane Improvement. However, $19,000 worth of bonds were cancelled during the year, thus accounting for the $8,000 increase.

A summary of the financial statement prepared by Mr. Lefferts shows the following for the general fund:

DECENTRALIZATION

Intellectual styles are not exempt from the law that guides humbler fashions. They change. If anything, they change faster than the models of the dressmakers. About hats and gowns there is observable a steady rhythm. The picture hat passes into the cloche of gradations. Skirts grow tighter or fuller and longer or shorter an inch at a time. But the intellectual's political philosophies jerk from one extreme to the other.

It is a matter of only five years since advanced political thinking was tremendously occupied with the Pluralistic State. Decentralization was the watchword in Europe. Today this same advanced thinking is fascinated by centralization; asserts its distrust of democracy; flirts with or actually accepts dictatorship. No wonder if the rapid oscillation in thought-styles sometimes leaves the wearer a little dizzy.

Not even the politically-conservative United States escapes these fads and fancies. Centralization was the watchword but a few years ago, local powers being surrendered to or usurped by state governments and state's rights passing into the hands of the Federal government. But centralization proved no panacea for the country's ill, bringing, instead, new problems.

So today everything is decentralization. Innovations in governmental functions and legislation are carefully scrutinized for evidences of centralization and hurriedly rejected where there is even a suspicion of its presence.

Governments, like persons, must live and learn.

LIONIZING A SCIENTIST

What is behind the lionizing of Albert Einstein—the curiosity of the crowd, the modern convention of "welcoming" everybody, or a new popularization of interest in things scientific?

This wizard of mathematics has received enough publicity to guarantee him crowds and cheers wherever he goes. His name is a by-word. Certainly many of those who have crowded about him in America have been attracted by natural curiosity, which is provoked by great things as well as by little things.

He is also famous enough, publicized enough and great enough to be assured an official welcome anywhere. No official handshaker or key-presenter could possibly overlook such a guest.

But the character of the reception given the author of the theory of relativity leads to the belief that something higher and more dignified was the incentive for this particular glad-handing. That something undoubtedly is the new interest the American people of all classes and degrees of intelligence are showing in scientists and the sciences. Their understanding is naturally greater of science in its applications than of science in the abstract. But their interest in abstract science is genuine. Their imagination is stirred by the profundity and the possibilities of the Einstein speculations.

This spontaneous manifestation of admiration for a truly great man partly compensates for certain other manifestations wherein the noble was ignored for the ignoble.

Jazz may be dying; but it is an awful swan song.

SYNOPSIS

The smug little town of Navestock jolted on, rustily, clumsily, contented to jog along in a rut, resenting the interference of anyone who sought to change its mode of living. The people, therefore, were very antagonistic toward young Dr. John Wolfe, assistant to the town's blundering old Dr. Threadgold, when he tried to better conditions. Wolfe, stunned at the unsanitary conditions he finds everywhere, prepares a map showing the unhealthy districts. Mrs. Threadgold comes upon the map and considering Wolfe's researches "gross disloyalty and underhand spying," suggests that he be warned to discontinue or be discharged. Wolfe's one inducement to keep fighting is the friendship and encouragement of lovely and vivacious Jesse Mascall. Wolfe shows Dr. Threadgold the dangerous germs he found in the well-water of a house where there is a case of diphtheria. The narrow-minded Threadgold, afraid to face facts and fearing Wolfe may usurp his position, resents the younger man's "interference." Wolfe warns of a terrible calamity should typhoid fever or cholera strike Navestock. Not wishing to appear superior, Wolfe turns over his findings to Threadgold to do with as he pleases. Later, the old doctor tells his wife a convincing tale of how he put Wolfe in his place. She urges him to burn Wolfe's papers. Discouraged and longing for someone to talk to, Wolfe visits Jesse, who urges him to stay and fight. Then, gazing into each other's eyes, they are strangely embarrassed. Josiah Crabbe, the one inhabitant of Navestock who has the courage to live up to his convictions and is hated for it, is keenly interested in Wolfe. Following a tirade of abuse from the townspeople, Threadgold decides to discharge Wolfe. He destroys the young doctor's research report.

CHAPTER THIRTY

Wolfe had left his horse in the stable and was pulling off his gloves in the half-darkened surgery when he heard footsteps coming along the passage that led to the hall. The door opened, and a white cap appeared.

"Is that you, Mr. Wolfe?"

"Yes, Kate."

"Dr. Threadgold told me to tell you that he wanted to see you, sir, directly you came in."

"Yes, Where is he?"

"In the dining-room, sir."

"All right. And, Kate, get me a cup of tea. I haven't had anything since dinner."

"I will, sir. I'll put it in here for you."

Wolfe made his way towards the dining-room. The lamps had not yet been lit, and the dusk that filled the house roused in Wolfe a feeling of vague melancholy. Intuition told him as he put out his hand to open the door that he was nearing the end of his sojourn in Prospect House.

The room was full of the twilight, and as Wolfe entered he saw reflected in a large, gilt-edged mirror the dark masses of the mulberry trees and a little streak of yellow sky. Threadgold was standing at one of the open windows. His back was towards Wolfe, and he did not turn at once, but waited till Wolfe had shut the door.

"You sent for me, sir?"

"Ah, is that you, Mr. Wolfe? Yes, I left word that I wanted to see you. I have something serious to discuss."

Threadgold spoke these words half out of the open window. He turned slowly, holding himself very erect, his hands behind his back—a little man standing upon his dignity.

"Sit down, Mr. Wolfe."

Wolfe sat sideways on one of the Chippendale chairs, one arm resting upon the back. There was a moment's silence before Threadgold began.

"I am sorry to say, Mr. Wolfe, that I must give you your dismissal. You haven't been a success in Navestock, sir, not a success. I regret it, but that is the truth."

Wolfe did not move.

"I cannot say that this comes as a surprise to me," he said. "I don't think that there is very much to be discussed."

"Mr. Wolfe, I agree with you. But I feel that I am bound to explain my reasons to you. In the first place, sir, you are absolutely lacking in tact—tact, Mr. Wolfe, tact. You have offended old patients of mine. You have caused me infinite annoyance. Enthusiasm untempered by discretion, sir, is a dangerous thing, a very dangerous thing."

"No doubt."

Wolfe's eyes were turned towards the window where the little, short, black figure did not come into his line of vision. He was thinking. But to Threadgold—a weak man—a silence was a thing to be feared.

"I have already written to an agency in London, Mr. Wolfe, desiring them to send me one of their tried men. I shall expect him within a week. Our obligations to each other cease when I hand you a month's salary in advance. I shall not quarrel about that. No doubt you will like to be looking about for a new berth."

There was the clinking of coins. The little black figure moved from the window, counted out ten sovereigns, and placed them in two piles upon the table. Wolfe did not move.

"Thank you."

"Don't mention it, Mr. Wolfe. I felt that it was necessary to do this for you."

"And I may take it, sir, that we no longer owe each other anything?"

"That is so."

"Then I must ask you to return me that map and those papers that I handed you the other day."

Threadgold stood stock-still a moment. Then he went back three steps, thrust his hands into his trouser pockets, inflated his chest, and stared hard at the opposite wall.

"Those papers no longer exist, Mr. Wolfe."

"Indeed!"

"They dealt with matters that form part of my practice, and you obtained this material while you were in my employment."

"You mean to say, sir, that you have destroyed them?"

"I do. They have been burned."

Wolfe rose up. To Threadgold the tall figure seemed to grow and to elongate itself in the dusk. Into the silence that filled the room came the fluttering of a breeze in the mulberry trees across the way.

"Dr. Threadgold, you had no manner of right to burn those papers."

"Indeed, sir, indeed! And upon what grounds?"

"I will tell you."

Wolfe's voice was very quiet, but it was a voice that gave Threadgold the impression that it might break out at any moment into ringing and passionate anger.

"Those facts that I laid before you are things that cannot be disproved or denied. In burning my papers you have assumed the attitude of a man who wishes to suppress the truth."

"Sir!"

"In your own interests and in the interests of—"

The little black figure jerked its arms, vehemently and with indignation.

"Mr. Wolfe, not another word."

"Wait."

It was a word thrown sharply at a rebellious dog.

"You have burned those papers."

Very well. That act absolves me from any sentimental consideration that might have weighed with me in this matter. I shall let this be known. I shall take care to let the facts be known."

Threadgold bubbled like a round pot on the boil.

"Mr. Wolfe, sir, will you kindly leave this house? Take your money, and don't talk impertinent nonsense. You have no further business in this town, and I don't think any of us will be sorry to see your back."

"I have not yet left Navestock."

"Braggadocio and insolence, Mr. Wolfe!"

"There is a possibility that I may remain in Navestock. We need not discuss it. If you will excuse me, I will go and put my things together."

Wolfe picked up the money, and turned towards the door. He paused for a moment as though about to say something, but thought better of it, and left Dr. Threadgold alone in the darkening room.

In the surgery the girl had lit the lamp, and covered Wolfe's tea-cup with a saucer to keep it warm. A plate of bread and butter stood beside the cup. Wolfe made his last meal in Prospect House.

The same round moon that looked down on Moor Farm stared, round-faced at Wolfe walking like an athlete in training along the Wannington road. He had had his belongings moved to the "Crooked Billet," a little old inn at the end of King Street, and had taken a bedroom there for a week. It was the one "house" in Navestock that did not belong to Turrell's brewery, and Wolfe knew something of the man who kept it. In fact, the "Crooked Billet" belonged to Josiah Crabbe, and Raggy, the landlord, had been Crabbe's coachman years ago.

"What, leaving Dr. Threadgold, sir?"

"Yes, I am."

"Sorry to hear it, sir."

"You must be one of the exceptions, Mr. Raggy."

"I don't know about that, sir, I don't know about that."

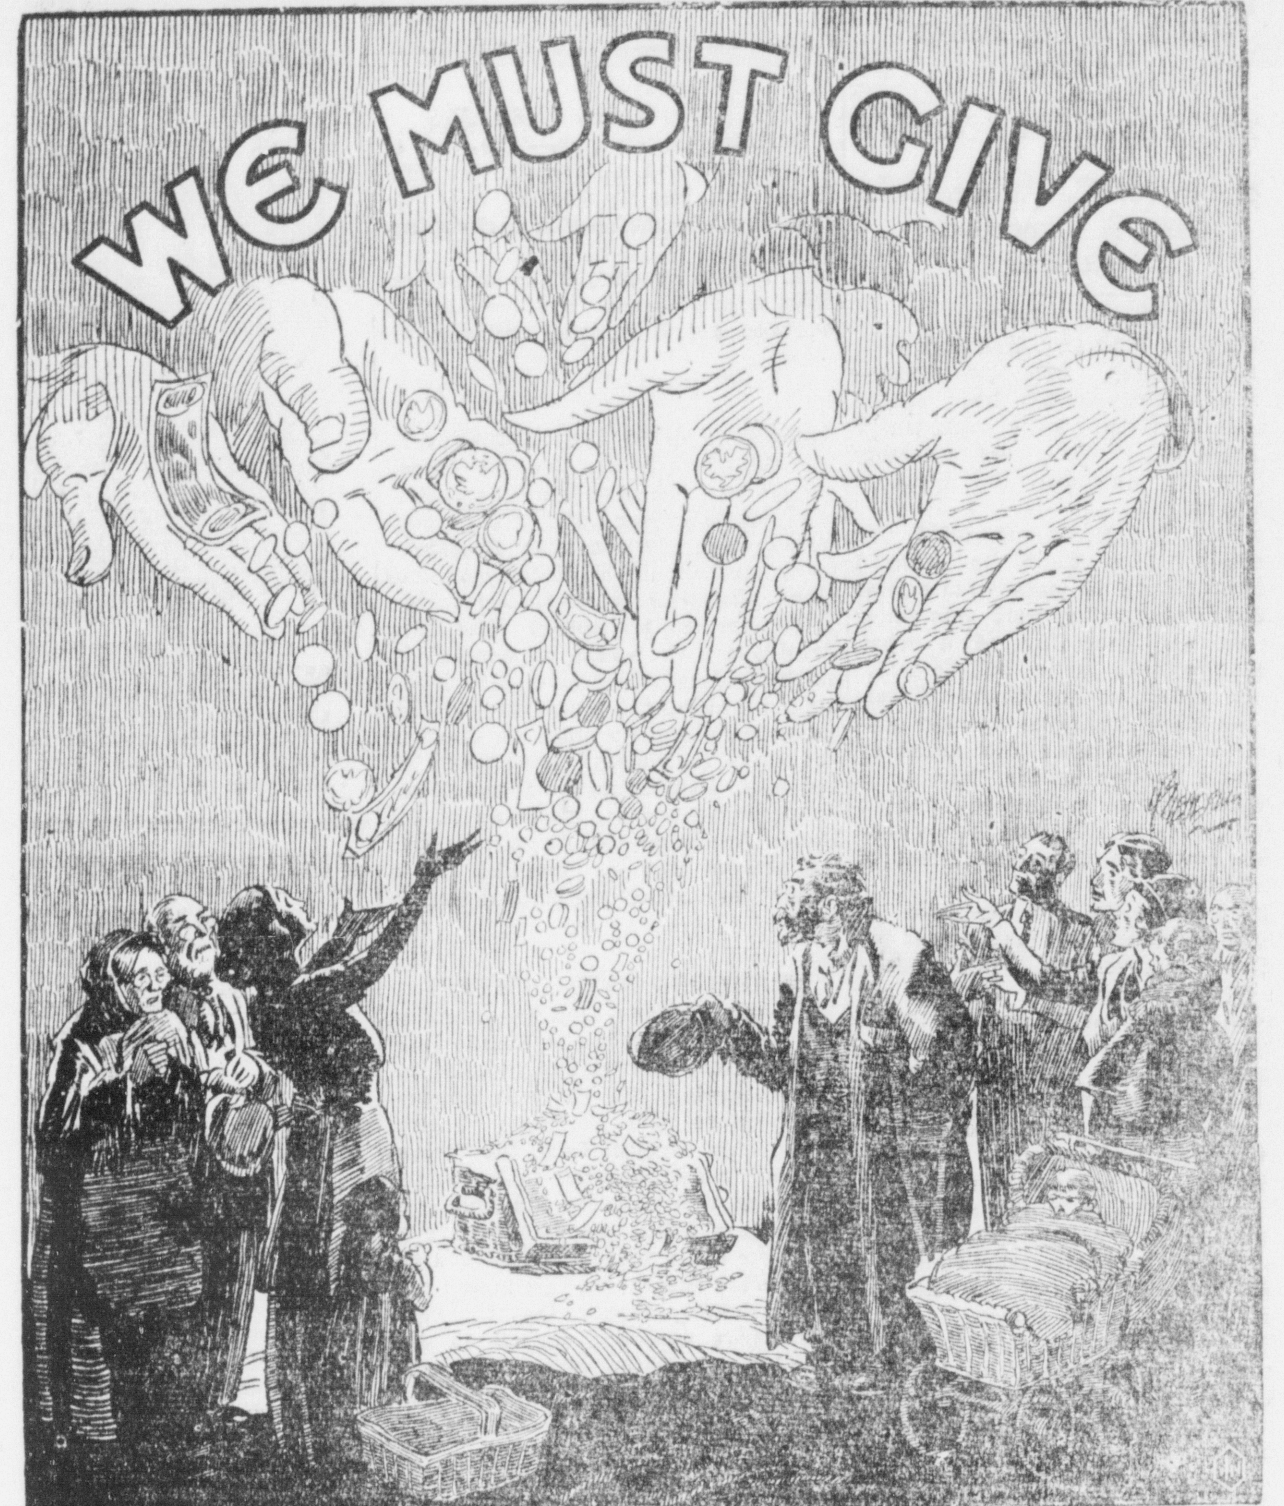

Mr. Raggy had carried Wolfe's baggage up on his own shoulders. He was an austere man, and kept an austere house, priding himself "that decent men could step in and have a decent glass of liquor, with no foul talk and no foul language desecrating my premises." Mr. Raggy would deliver little moral lectures from behind the bar, and drop pithy sayings while he filled the beer mugs. If such a thing as a Puritanical publican can be imagined, Mr. Raggy was one. His house was as clean and as burnished as the quarter-deck of a battleship. Wolfe found his bedroom to be a study in white, white walls, white chintz curtains, white coverlet, and the very furniture painted white.

Wolfe had unpacked his belongings by candlelight, and then sat himself down at the dressing-table and made an examination of the funds in hand. He had received some £70 in all from Threadgold, but part of it had gone in new linen, boots, a suit of clothes, riding-breeches, a few surgical instruments, books, charities, and tobacco. He had about forty pounds left, no great sum to stock a war-chest with, and, meditating upon the sincerity of these facts, he had gone down to the long, low room beside the bar to make a supper of beer, cold meat, and bread and cheese. Mr. Raggy had shown Wolfe great courtesy in his austere way.

"Look on this room as your own private apartment, sir. A few very quiet and respectable gentlemen drop in on occasions for a whiff of tobacco. But they won't intrude on you, sir, they won't intrude."

Washington Letter

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
(Staff Correspondent L. N. S.)

WASHINGTON.—Federal law enforcement officials foresee the time when "Police-men of the air" will be operating all along the vast borders of the country.

Airplane smuggling is increasing. Just as the automobile was seized upon by bank bandits, rum runners and other law violators, the airplane now is being used by jewelry and narcotics smugglers.

The field of the airplane is somewhat limited because its load is small. But it is called the ideal vehicle for narcotic and gem smugglers.

Customs officials, according to Commissioner T. X. A. Ebele found a large shipment of watch movements which came in rabbit skins.

Recently, he said, a border patrolman of the air operating in Texas captured a smuggling airplane. On another occasion an airplane was chased 250 miles.

The border patrol air pilot, he explains, endeavors to get over or under the airplane he is chasing. Thus the fleeing pilot cannot see him. When the smuggler is getting ready to land, the patrolman shoots his plane ahead and lands just in front of him.

The custom department has three planes, but hopes to enlarge its patrol force.

The smuggling is from both Canada and Mexico. Smuggling planes starting from Canada frequently land in Iowa and Kansas, hundreds of miles from the border.

With the apparent collapse of the illicit narcotics business in Europe, federal officials expect to see many attempts made to establish opium farms in sparsely settled parts of the country.

Only one opium farm has been started in the recent history of the country, according to officials of the narcotics bureau. This was in Louisiana. The farmer had raised a supply of poppies, and visioned riches, when he was discovered. His poppy fields were destroyed.

MYSTERIOUS COLORS ARE SEEN IN DRESS CENTERS OF PARIS

By ALICE LANGEIER
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS.—Mysterious colors are being seen at many of the smart dress-makers in Paris just now.

There is a lovely deep violet which looks like a vivid blue to many people and will certainly be responsible for many optical illusions.

Salmon, a shade which has been out of the picture for a number of seasons, is back again with a marvellously mysterious tone to it that is half-orange and half-mauve.

Slate-grey and a pale beige in a rough woolen fabric are also seen.

Brown and black come for evening and there is some brown for daytime. White washing collars and ties trim black, brown and grey frocks, and a slate-grey crepe dress, has a three-quarter length coat trimmed with grey sealskin. A light beige woolen dress and cape are worn with a tomato-colored red belt and hat, another mysterious shade unlike the ordinary reds.

Figured black and white, brown and white, green and white satin dresses have the pattern cut out to lie as leaves across the top of the arm.

Corn-colored satin is popular for evening, often with brilliant little touches in the form of metal stars, diamante buttons and paillettes.

Other smart shades are orchid-pink, grass-green, white-yellow and poppy-red. Two new jersey silk fabrics of dull surface are in light and dark coral pinks. Crinkly pale apricot-yellow scarves look well with them. Schiaparelli is using satin in new yellows and a pale green which she calls the "heart of the lily."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Your skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes three good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Reagent's substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

EXPECT EXCITING TILT IN BASKETBALL TONIGHT

Another exciting night of basketball is expected tonight in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall. In the first game, the Knights of Columbus will battle to keep out of the cellar with the Hawks. The Aces will meet the Paterson Parchment Paper Company in the battle for fourth place.

The Caseys have won but one game in five starts, while the Hawks have yet to win a game. A defeat for the Caseys tonight will make things rather tough for them and put them in a position to end up in last place. The Hawks are out to win tonight as this is their only hope of getting out of the last position in the circuit.

Nothing would please the Paterson team better than to defeat the Aces tonight as at present the Aces are in fourth place with three wins and two defeats. A win tonight for the Paper Mill team will put them in a fine position to finish in the first division.

The opening tap-off will take place at eight o'clock sharp.

MASKED MARVEL TO RETURN TO ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 29.—The return of the Masked Marvel to active mat warfare and Sandor Szabo's match against George Manich head-line the wrestling show at the Trenton Arena tomorrow night.

The Marvel has been on the sidelines due to a complication of boils and a sprained wrist. He will endeavor to retain his mysterious personality when he engages in a finish match with Charley Dish, 240-pound Norwegian. Dish is a ponderous toeman, who is conversant with every rule and strategem of the mat game and usually wears down his opposition with his huge bulk. The Marvel has a 10-pound pull in the weights and will need it all to overcome the burly Scandinavian.

Szabo, most popular of all foreign matmen, will come to grips with the versatile Manich, Belmar, N. J., grappler. The Jerseyite is one of the cleanest wrestlers in the game and one of the few who has never heard the jeers of the crowd. That this will be a cleanly contested match is a foregone conclusion. Szabo is primarily an orthodox scientific grappler and resorts only to the rough stuff when his opponent employs those tactics. Manich's forte is straight, smart wrestling and lovers of the science of the game will enjoy this bout devoid of fistcluffs and foul methods.

A new and colorful figure in mat circles makes his debut to Capital City addicts. He masquerades under nom-de-guerre of the "Red Devil." In a telegram to Promoter Dick Curley, the "Red Devil" stated he is the real Canadian Masked Marvel and that Tiny Ruff, who was pinned by the American Marvel, was an imposter. Curley, rather than match him against the Masked Marvel, decided that he must show his wares against another wrestler. George Hagen was selected as his opponent, and the "Red Devil" accepted Hagen with alacrity. This will be a 30-minute go.

Steve Znoski, Rider College Pole, takes on the barrel-chested Lithuanian rowdy, Joe "Bull" Komar, in another 30-minute event.

Century Miltstead, Yale favorite of the fair sex, meets Jack Riley, Olympic champion, in a time limit match that will be comparable with the Szabo-Manich bout for clean, clever grappling.

SPORT SHOTS

By
MAXWELL J. GORDON

DO YOU KNOW THAT . . . Jim Rabicam, local manager of the Atlantic Ice Company, is a veteran in basketball circles? . . . The smiling Jim played with a number of the leading quintets in and around Coatesville, his former home town. . . He has been out of the game for several years until recently when he agreed to manage and play for the Odd Fellows in the Bristol league. . . In his first appearance for the "Odd Boys" he scored fourteen points.

Edmund Dougherty, a forward on the third ward basketball team, is getting a try-out with the St. Mary's five in the Trenton City League. . . and John Dougherty of the Hibernians is a member of the Palmer Business School basketball team. . . Joe Agresta, who played in the backfield for the Bristol A. A. team this past season, shows promise of developing into a star back. . . Young Joe besides being a great ground galloper is a great kicker. . . He boots the ball over 50 yards.

Proving that football has made the greatest progress in the hearts and minds of Bristol youth in the last decade. . . This town had six gridiron aggregations, not including the large squad at the high school, on the field this past season. . . Each eleven was well organized and completed well-planned schedules. . . The teams were: Bristol A. A., St. Ann's, White Elephants, Third Ward, Penn. A. C. and Harriman Hawks. . . And to think that only ten years ago the high school had great difficulty in organizing a complete team. . . But for the fine work of three enthusiastic young men who came to this town from Muhlenburg College to teach in the local schools Bristol might still be in the doldrums as far as football is concerned.

These young men—Frank Butz, Roy Hoffman and the present principal of the high school, Warren Snyder—worked like Trojans to form the nucleus of what this town has in a football way.

MILDRED BABE DIDRIKSON—GREATEST OF ALL WOMAN ATHLETES!

SHE WILL TRY TO WIN THE GOLF TITLE NEXT YEAR!

SHE WILL BE A CONTENDER FOR DIVING HONORS IN 1933!

BABE WON THE HURDLES AND THE JAVELIN THROW AND PLACED SECOND IN THE HIGH JUMP IN THE 1932 OLYMPICS.

ALREADY at the age of nineteen Mildred Babe Didrikson has earned general recognition as the greatest woman athlete in sport history, but as far as her athletic prowess is concerned she says that we "ain't seen nothin' yet."

After having ruined most of the world's records in the women's track and field events, and winning two Olympic championships while placing second in a third Olympic event, one would think that the Babe would be inclined to take things easy for a while and rest on her laurels. Instead, she intends to branch out into several other sports next year, and from reports she comes close to being unbeatable at any sport she tries.

Everyone has heard the story of Miss Didrikson's golf—how, after shooting only eleven rounds of golf in her life, she goes around in 82. Next year she intends to go out for the women's golf crown, and if she keeps improving her game at that rate, don't bet against her chances—in spite of the Glenn Collett, Vares, the Helen Hicks's and the Virginia Van Wies.

Now they are saying that the Babe is even more talented at swimming and diving than she is at the royal and ancient game of golf. Genuine experts who have seen her perform say that she is a match for Helene Madison at swimming, and just as much so for Dorothy Poynton and Georgia Coleman at diving.

Believe it or not, as dear old Ripley would say—but there it is, nevertheless.

After seeing Miss Didrikson perform to perfection all the most different dives that a woman can execute, Miss Charlotte Epstein, coach of the Women's Swimming Association, said at once that the Babe was good enough right then and there to represent the United States in the Olympic diving.

It is said by those who should know that she swims more powerfully than the famed Helen Madison, and experts have an idea that after a short period of practice she could defeat the Olympic champion in a quarter-mile race. All this helps to explain why she once boasted "I can do anything that a man can do in any sport."

You'll hear a lot of the Babe's activities during the indoor track season this winter, but the real fun will start next summer when she goes out for the golf and swimming laurels.
